INFORMATION

When in a bankrupt's estate, the assets are so considerable that creditors without preferential rights may also receive a share of the estate, a proof of debt procedure is usually started. During the proof of debt procedure, the District Court receives evidence to the claims on the bankrupt company. The executor will then prepare an assessment of the accuracy of the claims and draw up a proposed share-out.

If you want to lodge proof of a claim in the bankruptcy you should write to the District Court within the time specified in the notification. In your petition to lodge a claim you must clearly state the amount you are claiming in total; you must also attach invoice documentation or other documents you want to invoke. All documents shall be sent to the District Court in duplicate. The claim must be signed (original signature).

If you do not lodge proof of a claim, you will not receive a share-out in the bankruptcy.

Even creditors who claim priority rights must lodge proof of a claim in order to be able to receive a share-out.

If you lodge proof of a claim too late, you may not receive a share-out in the bankruptcy. You will nevertheless have to pay a deferred claim fee in order for your claim to be at all eligible for a share-out.

Please note that the deadline for lodging a claim (The person lodging the claim in the bankruptcy must submit it in writing to the District Court no later than...) is the date that applies. The date for an objection refers to any objections (generally from the executor) to claims received within the specified time frame. The date for a conciliation meeting only applies if an objection has been made regarding a claim and the creditor lodging a claim does not consent to these objections.
